FINE FINISHES

With vanity units and storage in 25 gloss and matt lacquer finishes, the Miko collection by Scavolini – the newest of the Italian brand’s bathroom offerings – is as versatile as it is stylish. We’re particular fans of the slatted oak-effect doors and the sleek, marble-look Pietra Grey laminate. Bathrooms start from £5,000, Scavolini

SCREEN TIME

We’re long-time fans of Matki for its neat and stylish bathroom solutions, and the new EauZone wall-hinged bath screen is the smart-looking upgrade our space needed. Featuring 10mm-thick safety glass and solid brass hinges, it’s offered in a choice of sizes and 13 finishes. From £937.20, Matki

BATHING BEAUTY

It’s not often we feature smaller bathroom accessories on these pages, but we were charmed by the concept of The Bath Project, a bath-in-a-box concept that places the ritual of bathing front and centre with a range of cosmetic products designed to soothe and heal. The Ritual kit includes a porcelain cup and bowl as well as bamboo accessories that will look good on display when you’re not indulging in a bit of self-care. Bathing Ritual kit, £70, The Bath Project

TAP INTO THIS

Perennial Livingetc favourite deVOL’s latest launch is something to get excited about if you’re in the market for a kitchen tap: its new Antique Silver finish, designed in collaboration with Perrin & Rowe, is in our view the perfect cool-toned hardware. Available for the Ionian and Mayan taps, it’s a classic choice. Antique Silver Ionian tap, from £680, deVOL
