

Milan Design Week 2022: Highlights from Our Camera Roll

The best product launches, installations and exhibitions from the sizzling 60th edition of Salone del Mobile and the accompanying Fuorisalone festival.

WORDS Elizabeth Pagliacolo, Eric Mutrie

POSTED Jun 16, 2022

SHARE Twitter, Facebook, LinkedIn, Pinterest, Email

“Design is Milano is design.” This phrase was splashed all over Lombardy’s capital last week on colourful street posters that signalled the triumphant return of the global design industry’s main event: Milan Design Week 2022.

Commissioned by the local tourism agency, the posters are the work of Riccardo De Franceschi, the Milan-born creative director of London typeface design studio Dalton Maag. And just as their slogan suggests, there was hardly a corner of the city that wasn’t playing host to some sort of spectacle. Even as the temperature reached the mid-30s, it was the design scene that truly sizzled.

The biggest draw of the week-long design event was the 60th edition of the sprawling furniture expo, Salone Del Mobile, which was held at the Fiera Milano exhibition centre, where major design brands unveiled fresh products that provided insights into hot new colours (oranges, teals, and purples). Meanwhile, in the EuroCucina section of the fair, there was equal focus on cooking as a science and as an art form, with innovative new approaches to range hoods, steam ovens, and storage solutions sharing space with sculptural new kitchen systems.

Scavolini's booth was a EuroCucina standout, showcasing the brand's first outdoor kitchen in a setting that mimicked a traditional Italian courtyard — complete with a perfect blue sky.

10/36

Also on display at Scavolini was Luca Nichetto's Jeometrica, a system that features doors framed with graphic aluminum accents.

11/36